His passion for the art, stems from his days on the stage in his small hometown. After a big dance/music number or even after the show, he would, not making it show, break the "4th Wall" and look in the direction of his family. They would always sit in the same spot, and see the looks on the faces of his little brother and sister. They were that of complete awe and amusement. He wants to put that on the faces of more than the 200-300 people that would attend the small theater.
