Actor Bio:

Brandon Ludwig was raised in the countryside west of Waterloo with only 3 channels on the television - all they had was Oprah and the news. Ludwig attended Listowel District Secondary School and was involved in the A/V Club where they put on student musicals. Brandon studied at the University of Waterloo, where he majored in history but wasn't satisfied there and so he acted in indie films as an escape. With university coming to an end Brandon wasn't ready to settle down and discovered The Second City. Loving it there, he quit his job at the bread factory and left for Toronto with his best friend Arcade 'Danger' Riley to take on the world. His brother Sheldon joined forces with him a couple years later and brought Don Shal Studios. While struggling to establish himself, he worked odd jobs as a roadie for Fred Penner, a newspaper boy and the best job of his life, Mardi Gras King at the Canadian National Exhibition. After numerous TV guest appearances throughout the years, 2020 marks a significant turning point in Ludwig's career with the launch of "Gamer's Paradise," where he stars in the series. His next adventure lands him starring alongside sci-fi star Robin Dunne in a buddy comedy film full of sex, drugs, rock 'n' roll...oh, and naked sky diving.
