Actor Bio:

Jordan Daem was born on May 5, 1987 and attended elementary and part of middle school in Dallas, Texas before him & his family decided to move to Los Angeles, CA where he resides now. Jordan attended Taft High School in Woodland Hills where he joined his school's vocal ensemble and theater group. He then went on to college and studied Communications at Cal State University, Northridge.

Since childhood, Jordan knew that he wanted to be an entertainer. In 2006, Jordan finally got that opportunity when he obtained his first record deal as the lead singer of an Iranian "boy band" called the Juniors 5. In 2007 they released their album and traveled the world extensively to promote the record. Although the album was a success, Jordan decided to part ways with the band and shed his "boy band" image for a career in acting. Today he is a trained actor and has done many shorts and independent film projects.

In his free time, Jordan loves to spend his days at the beach with his two Boston Terriers. His love for animals and nature inspires all aspects of his life and helps him balance out his hectic schedule.
