Actor Bio:

Matthew's acting career began his senior year in High School when he decided it would be so much easier to play a lawyer on TV than to actually become one, and much more fun. His work on stage ranged from Shakespeare's Historical "Henry V" to Neil Simon's comedic female version of "The Odd Couple" to live Comedy Improvisation at the Kansas City & Colorado Renaissance Festivals. He then caught the attention of a promising young director in the Kansas City area who, after using him in a couple film projects, cast him as the lead in a biopic he was directing about the life of Bill Corum, the head of a local prison ministry. With his deep seeded love of acting, Matthew saved up enough money, joined AFTRA, and moved out to Hollywood to further his career.

Within a year, Matthew had a role as a series regular on "Cyberkidz," played one of the Van Buren Boys on "Seinfeld," & landed himself as a client with the Sara Bennett Agency. When Sara decided to close her doors, Matthew took a break from acting to concentrate on his family life.

In 2008 Matthew has re-entered the game, studying with Katt Shea, and wrapped up the year, refining his voice over work in a workshop with MJ Lallo.

2009 brought him to bang. Comedy Theater where he got back to his improvisational theater roots, and he is currently hosting The Big Show at bang. on Friday nights at 8:00 pm.

Matthew is looking for new representation both commercially & theatrically.

Anyone interested in representing him should contact him at the number listed.
