Actor Bio:

Born and raised in Birmingham, Alabama, Paul Galliano discovered a knack for theatrics very early, and by the age of 14, he had made up his mind to pursue a career in acting. The following years were filled with numerous stage productions throughout the southeast and intense training sessions at various theaters.

Flash forward, and Paul finds himself driving 2,100 miles across the country with all of his belongings in a rented U-Haul truck. After arriving in Los Angeles, he quickly began landing roles in low-budget films, and it wasn't long before his resume included more notable work such as The WB's "Charmed" and the independent feature "Until the Night," playing opposite actor Norman Reedus ("The Boondock Saints," "Blade II").

Paul's next milestone came when he booked the lead role in THE HISTORY CHANNEL's "Breaking Vegas: Card Count King." Soon after that, Paul beat out over 100 other gentlemen for the principal male role in a print campaign that appeared in several high profile publications. His next role, the male lead in the independent film "The Rose of Sharon," gave Paul a unique opportunity to travel since the film was partially shot in Israel.

He has appeared on HBO's "Entourage," opposite Kevin Dillon and Michael Hitchcock. Paul was also the main character in the web series "The Reggie Bush Project" playing opposite the titular athlete. Next, Paul recurred as Anthony Martin on The CWs "Veronica Mars" and has since appeared on ABC soaps "General Hospital" and "All My Children."

Paul currently resides in beautiful downtown Burbank.
